

History at GHF

Intent – our aims and ambitions for our Historians.

History is a key subject to engage pupils' creative and critical thinking (igniting a delight and love of learning) about change, both locally and globally, and the implications for the future.

Through the study of History, pupils gain a coherent knowledge and understanding of their country's past and that of the wider world, which enables them to become outward facing.

History enables pupils to explore cause and consequence, identifying catalysts for change, the effects on societies, other perspectives and viewpoints and human achievement and creativity.

Introducing pupils to diversity within societies and the relationships between different groups over time, the study of History will help our children to understand the heritage of our diverse communities and enable them to understand why they should respect all cultures, respect the individual and to understand the need for tolerance.

To enhance the empathy and compassion of our children, the study of History will develop pupils' understanding of the complexity of people's lives in different times and places. History challenges pupils to view events from different perspectives, understanding the roots of conflict, leading to a greater understanding of events and situations and helping them to understand the roots of their own conflicts.
